

Legion And Auxiliary Hold Annual Social

The American Legion Post and its Auxiliary held the annual summer social in the form of a barbecue supper last Thursday evening at 6 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Baumgartner.

Plans had been made to serve the supper on the lawn, but due to the weather, the table was placed on the spacious front porch, and a most delicious supper was spread before a very congenial crowd.

Following the supper, everyone gathered in the living room where Mrs. P. D. Pendleton, the new president of the Auxiliary, "measured" the party, each one present paying a penny for each inch of his waist measure. A great deal of fun resulted in the procedure and the Auxiliary collected a nice little contribution to its local treasury.

A short business meeting of the Auxiliary was held, during which Mrs. Pendleton read the outstanding committees for the new year. The Auxiliary is extremely proud of its new president, and if leadership and initiative are requirements necessary to the success of a good executive, the Auxiliary has every reason to look forward with optimism to a most successful year under the capable leadership of Mrs. Pendleton.

Those present at this social gathering were Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Pendleton, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Frost, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Appleton, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holcomb, Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Woolley, Mrs. M. P. Jeter, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Baumgartner.

Chamber Of Commerce To Hold Meeting

Montgomery, Ala. — Agricultural, industrial, and civic notables from all parts of the state will unite in a review of Alabama progress at the annual meeting of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, called by Benjamin Russell, president, for Thursday, October 19. The meeting will consist of an all-day program at which the State Chamber will take stock of its year's work of "Building Alabama."

The annual gathering of State Chamber members from all parts of the state is expected to be the most representative assembly of both large and small industrial and agricultural interests ever held in Alabama. An accurate picture of present day Alabama will be provided by speakers at the session.

Calling attention to recent developments in Alabama industry and agriculture, President Russell said the annual meeting will emphasize accomplishments during the past year and outline objectives for the coming year.

"Definite progress has been made during the year just closing in the program of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce," Mr. Russell said. "The State Chamber itself has several major accomplishments and other agencies have carried forward many points in our program."

"We feel that the time has come to review how far we have come and to chart a course which will lead to greater progress during the coming 12 months."

The morning session will consist of addresses on the progress made during the past year. Mr. Russell will speak along with several others at a noon luncheon and the business session will be held during the afternoon. The annual meeting will close with a banquet that night.

Forestry Is Promising In Lower South

Auburn, Ala.—It looks as though King Cotton may have to quit his throne one of these days. The U. S. Forest Service reports a woodman on a wood pile or a lumber pile may succeed him—at least in the lower South.

Completing a survey of the South's forest resources, the foresters find the lower South is capable of supporting a greatly expanded forestry industry — if the timber is managed on a sustained yield basis.

They report more than 10 thousand forest-using plants in operation in Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, Louisiana, and parts of Texas, Oklahoma, and Arkansas. These include 8,000 sawmills, 1,100 turpentine stills, 24 pulp mills, and many other forest products activities. Millions of dollars have been invested in new wood-using plants in this territory during the past few years. But there is still room for more, if care is taken.

If care is taken—that means that enough suitable forest lands need to be provided in order to prevent too much cutting. It means also that such lands need to be placed under sound forestry management. That means management to produce successive crops of good, healthy timber—each crop up to the full capacity of which the land, the climate and the trees can produce.

The foresters found that at present the forest-growing stock is growing only about one-fourth or one-half as much as the sites can produce under proper management.

So, the Forest Service economists believe the forests of the South will provide a sound basis for a secure future industry if they are properly managed, protected, and used. Then forests will produce a continuous succession of timber crops that will be a permanent resource for a permanent industry.

Youth Administration Employs 83 Young People In Shelby County

An increased number of young people in Alabama will benefit from the work program of the National Youth Administration during the current fiscal year, July 1, 1939, through June 30, 1940, according to an announcement today by John E. Bryan, NYA state administrator.

During the month ending June 30 there were 5,000 youths employed on NYA projects in Alabama. These young people had monthly earnings averaging $75.000. Thus, it can be seen that the NYA spent approximately $1,000,000 for youth labor in Alabama during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, exclusive of amounts spent for materials and supplies.

83 in Shelby County

Results of a tabulation just completed and made public today show that during the month ending June 30 there were 83 youths employed on NYA projects in Shelby County, whose monthly earnings averaged $1,162.00. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1939, the NYA spent approximately $13,944.00 for youth labor in Shelby County, exclusive of amounts spent for materials and supplies.

The youth employed on NYA work projects were all between the ages of 18 and 24 inclusive. They were all young men and women out of school and unemployed, whose need had been certified by local relief authorities.

NYA projects in Alabama have included construction of schools, community centers, recreational

Peters-Baker Wedding Solemnized Saturday

The marriage of Miss Mary Hilda Peters to Robert Arthur Baker, of Birmingham, was solemnized by the Rev. J. M. Shores, pastor of the Montevallo Methodist Church, at 8:30 o'clock Saturday morning at the home of the bride.

The bride wore a street ensemble of Boston blue crepe with matching accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of orchids. The marriage vows were read before an improvised altar of fern and cut flowers.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. S. M. Mahan, as a graduate of Alabama College, and for the past year has been connected with the Little Shop of Personal Service of Montevallo. Mr. Baker, son of Mrs. L. M. Baker and the late Mr. Baker, of Birmingham, holds a responsible position with the T. C. I.

Those attending the wedding were members of the family: Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Mahan, Mrs. S. H. Wood, of Montevallo; Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Hargrove, Mobile; Mrs. Hamp Lane, Mrs. Floyd Eddings, Mr. Sammie Wood, Birmingham; Other guests were Mrs. A. C. Jeter, Miss Jack Bowden, Mrs. Bloomer Wilson, Miss Nancy Weems, Miss Roberta DeSear, and Miss Dorothy Jean Gilbert, all of Montevallo.

Immediately after the ceremony the couple left for a wedding trip.

13 STUDENTS FROM SHELBY ENROLLED AT JACKSONVILLE

Jacksonville, Ala. — Forty - five counties and five states were represented at the Jacksonville State Teachers' College summer school, according to Dr. C. W. Daugette, president. Thirteen students were enrolled from Shelby County, as follows:

Laurie Ferguson Spraks, G. O. Weldon, Jr., Columbiana; Mrs. Jewel Blackerby, Lewis Blackerby, Opal Blalock, Perrine Miner, Wilsonville; Clyde Baker, Harpersville; Reba Bentley, Westover; Elizabeth Denby, Nadine Thompson, Vincent; Lorenzo Dan Riggins, Vendiver.

A two-year certificate was awarded Mrs. Jewel Blackerby.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bagwell and son, Tim, have returned from Chapel Hill, N. C., where they have been spending the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Lewis and daughter, Miss Gene Lewis, are spending their vacation in Florida.

facilities, including pre-school play centers, repair of public buildings, operation of workshops and sewing rooms, handicraft projects, clerical activities, library service and book repair units, home economics projects, part-time resident homemaking centers, full-time resident projects sponsored by educational institutions, and many other types. The widespread use that facilities provided through NYA projects have received show they are needed. The fact that the projects have been locally sponsored by cities, counties, villages, school districts, and other governmental subdivisions, indicate they are regarded as useful and desirable. For the most part NYA expenditures have been for wages, while sponsoring agencies have contributed to the purchase of materials and equipment.

Habits of Work

Not only did these part-time NYA jobs provide youngsters with a much-needed cash income, but they provided an opportunity for boys and girls to acquire sound habits of work and experience. The basic skills which youths have developed on NYA projects will enable them to more readily secure jobs in private industry when openings are available.

It is a common practice on NYA projects to try youths out on several types of work in order that they may thus gain a broader understanding of the problems attached to various trades, and a better knowledge of their own aptitudes and abilities. After having

WPA Wage Scale To Be Raised

Shelby County WPA project workers will receive a substantial increase in monthly wages beginning September 1, according to an announcement this week by Col. W. G. Henderson, administrator for Alabama of the Works Projects Administration.

This increase in the schedule of monthly security wages for WPA project workers is in accordance with the requirements of the Emergency Relief Appropriation Act of 1939, and the intent of Congress as expressed in debate, it was explained in a statement from Col. F. C. Harrington, Works Progress Commissioner of Washington. The order provides for three-wage regions by geographical areas and within these wage regions provides for five classifications of workers; namely, professional and technical, skilled, intermediate, unskilled "A" and unskilled "B". Each of the wage regions is broken down by counties into four population classifications. These provide differentials in wages for counties, first, with no town of over 5,000 population; second, with the largest town between 5,000 and 25,000; third, between 25,000 and 100,000, and fourth, those in which the largest city has 100,000 or more population. This will make a total of only 60 different wage schedules as against the present number of more than 4,000.

Unskilled WPA wages in Region 3, which comprises the southern states, will jump from an average of $26 to $35 a month. Unskilled wages in this region in cities of 100,000 or over will be $50.70 a month against a present schedule of $40.

Shelby County, where no town or city has more than 5,000, according to the 1930 census, "unskilled B" workers will receive $31.20 per month, intermediates $42.90 per month, and skilled workers $54.60. These figures are all based on 130 hours of work per month.

However, in announcing this new schedule of monthly security wages for WPA workers in Alabama, Col. Henderson emphatically reminded workers that they are expected to accept private employment if it is offered them, provided they are offered the wage prevailing in the community for that class of work. Failure to accept such employment means immediate dismissal from WPA rolls, he stated, and a close check will be made on all reports of WPA workers refusing to accept private employment.

Bankhead Praises The New Deal To Legislature

Speaker Discusses Progressive Legislation of Congress in Roosevelt Administrations

Montgomery, Ala.—A distinguished American statesman and lawmaker, William B. Bankhead, last week came back to the halls of the Alabama legislature to revisit the scene where in 1900, as a delegate from Madison County, he launched his legislative career and which has since carried him to the top ranking position in this branch of public service to Speaker of the National House of Representatives.

Amid rousing ovation, Speaker Bankhead thanked members of the joint Senate and House, which had assembled to hear Alabama's distinguished son, and then launched into a ringing praise of the New Deal and its leader, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

State Notables Present

Among those who were present to hear the Speaker were Governor Frank M. Diron, Lieut.-Gov. Albert Carmichael, supreme court judges, and other dignitaries from Alabama, including several members of the congressional delegation.

At the outset, Speaker Bankhead reminded his audience of the chaos and confusion which reigned when President Roosevelt assumed command of the Washington scene in 1933.

"No other administration in peacetime since the establishment of the republic had ever confronted such a desperate situation, nor one which called for greater genius of leadership and courage. However, the American people have not so soon forgotten Fall and Denby and Forbes and Daugherty and Gaston Means, nor the scandals of former Republican administrations."

After Hoover

"But in 1933 when the Hoover administration ended, the situation was immeasurably more calamitous. Unmerciful disaster had followed fast and faster, and remember, my brethren, that was the fruit and harvest from 12 years of undisputed Republican control in the White House and Capitol Hill. It was a long regime of unbridled speculation and unrestrained granting of privilege to those who needed no such favoritism. It was a leadership that either did not have the capacity to conceive adequate measures of relief and reform or else totally lacked the courage to sponsor or execute them."

Then turning his remarks to President Roosevelt, he said:

"Such was evidently the conclusion of a tremendous majority of the American people when they

DOVE HUNTING REGULATIONS ANNOUNCED FOR 1939-40

Montgomery, Ala.—A new line of demarcation, United States Highway 80, has been established for division of the state into two regions for the 1939-40 dove hunting season, according to information received by Dr. Walter B. Jones, director of the Department of Conservation, from the United States Biological Survey. This replaces the more or less ragged line along county boundaries which caused much confusion in past years. Recommendation for the changes was made by the Conservation Department at the request of numerous county conservation councils. Counties, or parts of counties, lying to the north of U. S. 80 will be classified in the North Alabama area, and those south of it in the South Alabama area.

Hunting of doves will be legal north of U. S. 80 from September 15 through October 14, fifteen days later than last year's early split season, and from December 20 to January 31. South of U. S. 80, the season will open November 20 and continue through January 31, the same season as observed last year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Tidwell and son, Bill, have returned from Chapel Hill, N. C., where Mr. Tidwell has been studying this summer.

Seed Bids Rejected By Triple-A

Washington, D. C.—The Agricultural has announced that bids in response to a recent advertisement for the purchase of 5,512,000 pounds of hairy vetch and Austrian winter pea seed have been rejected because the prices bid were considered too high.

Except for one bid on a small quantity of seed, bids ranged in prices from $5.22 to $5.90 per hundred pounds for peas, delivered at local points in the southeastern states, and $10.10 to $16.00 per hundred pounds of vetch.

The rejected bids covered seed which would have been furnished to farmers in the South and Southeast in lieu of payments under the 1939 Agricultural Conservation Program. The purpose of the proposed seed purchase project—similar to the experiment carried out last year—was to increase the use of winter legumes in the southern and southeastern states, where land is subject to severe leaching and erosion. Such seeds would have been used principally by producers unable to purchase the seed otherwise or by producers in territory where the growing of these crops heretofore has not been a common practice.

State committees in the states where these seeds would have been furnished have been advised that they will not be available this year as a grant of aid.

Beer Outlets Show Marked Improvement

Mobile, Ala., Aug. 30—Marked improvement in retail beer outlets and public sentiment was reported to the Lion's Club Tuesday by David E. Dunn, director of Alabama's beer industry, as a result of the "clean up or close up" campaign launched by the wholesale beer distributors of the state.

"Reports from our investigators and from letters and comment of private citizens convince me that there has been a steady improvement in the conduct of retail beer outlets and in the sentiment of the public towards these outlets," Mr. Dunn told the club.

"We are determined to wipe out the scattered bad spots that reflect discredit upon an industry that is leading the way in self-regulation to the end that our product will be sold under conditions as wholesome as beer itself."

Praising Mobile for its work in attracting millions of dollars in new industry to the Port City within the last 12 months, Mr. Dunn declared that "I am trying to preserve for Alabama an industry which pays more than $1,000,000 annually in taxes to state, counties and cities, and gives employment to more than 5,000 Alabamians who draw wages exceeding $4,700,000 annually."

Since launching the "clean up or close up" campaign, Mr. Dunn said that 13 establishments had been closed, licenses of three suspended, four placed on probation, and more than 90 warned that conditions must improve.

"This record deals only with cases initiated before the ABC Board by the beer industry and does not reflect the continuing and aggressive drive of the ABC Board itself, which has resulted in the closing of many other law-violating outlets," Mr. Dunn said. "It has been only because of the full cooperation of the board, headed by Mobile's own E. Roy Albright as chairman, that our work has been effective."

"And I insist," Mr. Dunn said, "that when an industry itself moves against its own outlets of sale because those outlets are violating the law, then it proves its sincerity to see its product sold under clean, wholesome conditions."

SICK HEADACHE Usually Caused by Constipation

Sick Headache is usually another terrible result of Constipation. To gain relief you must relieve the congestion of waste matter that has accumulated in the system due to Constipation or improper elimination. You need more than just a common laxative. What you need is something that will give complete elimination and at the same time stimulate the bowels to a resumption of their normal, regular action. Take Taylor's Vega-Cal, A PURELY VEGETABLE, pleasant tasting preparation, that has been used by four generations. That is proof of its merit and popularity. New Yam Proving Success In Baldwin

Bay Minette, Ala.—Early sweet potatoes, especially the new copper-skinned Porto Rico variety planted for the first time here this year, are bringing Baldwin County a good profit, E. E. Hale, county agent, announces.

Five hundred bushels of the copper-skinned potatoes were brought in from South Carolina this spring and distributed over the county for seed production. This potato, developed by the Louisiana Experiment Station, has proven very successful in Louisiana and South Carolina where it is being grown extensively. The price has ranged from $2 to $1 and the yield has run from 80 to 150 bushels per acre.

In a number of counties seed of this new potato is being propagated by 4-H Clubs who have chosen this as their club project. County agents believe that within a year or two seed can be distributed to most farmers in their counties.

Baldwin farmers growing the new yam contacted by the county agent's office and results show that the potatoes are highly satisfactory with some of the farmers already shipping their yams. Shippers have equipped their regular potato washing machines so they can handle the sweet potatoes and are washing and packing in bushel baskets.

Mr. Hale said seed will be saved for next year and that farmers are multiplying their acreage as much as possible by putting out vines for seed purposes. He said the seed must be watched and carefully selected so the variety will not run out. Yams furnish a cash income in the late fall and winter that farmers would not have otherwise, said Mr. Hale.

Tourist Stations At Entrances To State Advocated

Auburn, Ala.—The Alabama Extension Service today joined the "advertise Alabama" movement with a suggestion by Homer S. Fisher, landscape gardener, that attractive roadside stands near the entrances to the state be selected as information centers on points to be seen by tourists.

Not only would this serve in directing the tourists to the towns and points of interest but bulletins and maps showing the state's beauty spots could be issued and distributed from these stations, Fisher said. "It has been estimated that 75 per cent of the people traveling our highways are seeking pleasure and recreation and are interested in seeing beautiful scenery," he said. "By selecting suitable roadside stands, or service stations in attractive park-like areas at the state line, the state could have a sure way of getting into the hands of the tourist information on the things in Alabama."

These stands should be uniformly marked as tourist information centers, so that visitors can recognize them; and they should be made as attractive as possible and should be carefully maintained.

"The operation of such information stands might well be turned over to private operators and at all times be subject to the inspection of the highway department or some other designated authority," he stated.

One form of information material could be a map showing the recreational and scenic points. Pictures of attractive scenes and handicraft and other products of the state could be on display at these stations. Most of the cost of printing and preparing the informational material could be covered by advertising in the bulletins and publications about the state, according to Fisher.

More than 40,000 people are employed in 129 textile plants in sixty-seven Alabama cities and towns, according to the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce. The aggregate value of the output of these plants is approximately $110,000,000 annually.

Development of Alabama's state parks as one step toward attracting tourists is a major objective of the recreation committee of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce. Col. Harry M. Ayres of Anniston, is chairman of the committee.

Mrs. Charlotte Peterson and sons, Francis and Winston, are visiting Mrs. Peterson's aunt, Miss Teresa Getzen of Fortson, Ga.

According to the Bureau of the Census figures, there were 61 deaths of infants under one year of age for every 1,000 live births in Alabama, as compared with infant mortality rates of 68 per 1,000 live births for Georgia and North Carolina, 67 per 1,000 live births for Louisiana, 80 per 1,000 live births for South Carolina, 63 per 1,000 live births for Tennessee, 64 per 1,000 live births for Texas, and 66 per 1,000 live births for Virginia. Bankhead went to the polls in November, 1932. Under the terrific impact of such perilous and gravely portentous circumstances, an aroused and frightened electorate recalled to full power a democratic administration. As its leader and chieftain they chose a man of great vision and courage, a man who was totally unwilling to close his eyes to the facts of a new order of conditions which had grown up in our country in the last generation and which needed drastic remedial action; a man who was wise enough to know that if our country was to survive and its basic institutions preserved, some major reforms were imperative; a man caring enough to venture into new fields of legislation to cure obvious evils; a man who, despite much bitter and vindictive criticism, despite occasional errors of action or policy, by every poll of public opinion still holds the personal affection and respect of a great majority of the American people—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Progressive Legislation

The Speaker briefly outlined emergency and progressive forms of legislation which were hurriedly enacted following President Roosevelt's induction into office. He pointed to the Banking Act, guaranteeing safety of deposits in all national and affiliated banks; the Security Exchange Commission Act, protecting public investments; the Civilian Conservation Corps, the National Youth Administration, emergency relief programs providing aid for the distressed and unemployed of the country including the vast development of worthwhile projects under the PWA and WPA programs which he termed "permanent benefits to the people."

He praised legislation bolstering the national defense, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Wagner Act, the wage-hour act, reciprocal trade treaties, agricultural legislation including the AAA of 1933, the Bankhead Cotton Control Act, the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act, the Bankhead-Jones Farm Tenant Act, and the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938.

Freight Rates

Although failing to mention the impending fight for control of Alabama's delegation to the 1940 Democratic National Convention, or Gov. Dixon's advocacy of an "un-instructed delegation," Speaker Bankhead pointed to President Roosevelt's sympathy with the South in the removal of freight rate and other discriminations.

"In connection with this legislation," he said, "a provision has been incorporated in both House and Senate bills known as the Hill-Ramspeck amendment, which in substance, provides that it shall be unlawful for railroads to establish rates with any undue advantage or disadvantage as to any region, district or territory. This constitutes a great initial victory in a fight all of us here in this southeastern territory have been waging for many years to remove the grossly unfair and punitive discrimination in freight rate differentials that have laid such a heavy hand upon our industrial competition with other sections. President Roosevelt is in full sympathy with our position on this problem. We will continue the fight until victory is won."

Tribute to the Administration

Speaker Bankhead in closing added, "The greatest tribute that could possibly be paid to the whole record of this administration is the fact that already the leading candidates for the Republican nomination for president have asserted that they would not attempt to repeal the substance of our Democratic measures which they in power did not have either the disposition or courage to enact."

"As one who has taken a part in formulating and sponsoring the party program, as one who has been compelled to recognize as now constituted we are a national and not a sectional party, as one who by the very logic of new conditions and new problems in our country has been reluctantly compelled to depart, in some measure, from inherited and cherished political doctrines of 50 years ago, I stand here this day before the representatives of my fellow citizens of Alabama, not to apologize for the record of

H. V. Kaltenborn, Adventurous News Commentator, Awarded Honorary Degrees

H. V. Kaltenborn (right) interviews Spanish soldiers with General Franco's army before Madrid.

H. V. Kaltenborn, the distinguished foreign correspondent and radio news commentator whose keen reporting of European affairs won him a national reputation almost overnight, was awarded two honorary degrees at commencement ceremonies this spring.

He received the degree of Doctor of More Humane Letters from Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., on June 12, and a week later the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, Wis., conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

Adventures All Over the World

To look at Mr. Kaltenborn, no one would think that this scholarly gentleman was an adventurer. Yet when he dashed out on a Spanish battlefield and made the first on-the-scene broadcast of an actual battle, his action was typical of his entire life.

He was in a tight spot, with shells bursting nearby and bullets whizzing past him, but he was as calm and collected as he is at home. And his resourcefulness and courage carried him through, just as they had many times before.

For twenty years a foreign correspondent and newspaper editor, Mr. Kaltenborn has been all over the world in search of news. He has interviewed Mussolini, Hitler and Chiang Kai-shek. While in China he was captured by bandits but was released when he delighted his captors by juggling a piece of straw on his nose.

Ex-Washington Correspondent

Equally at home in American politics, Kaltenborn was a Washington correspondent and covered the political convention of both parties in 1932 and 1936. His radio career began 18 years ago. Recently he was chosen as the outstanding news commentator of the year, by the Radio Daily poll of newspaper editors and columnists, the Motion Picture Daily, the Scripps-Howard newspapers, the National Federation of Press Women and the Women's National Radio Committee.

As war clouds darken over Europe, millions of radio listeners continue to depend on Mr. Kaltenborn's authoritative observations of the situation. His program, "Kaltenborn Edits the News," is heard every Sunday and Tuesday at 9:30 p. m. Eastern Standard Time over the Columbia network.

Indicative of the importance attached to its work, the farm products marketing committee is the largest of all the committees of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce. The committee is made up of 65 members, headed by J. Chapline Hodges and Luther Fuller, both of Birmingham.

Miss Betty Davis and Mr. Harry Davis of Savannah, Ga., are the guests of their cousin, Miss Ann Davis, this week.

Mrs. Denson Elliott left Saturday for a vacation in Mobile.

Youth Administration

worked at several different types of jobs, these young people are in a position to make a more considered choice of a vocation with their talents.

Placement Service

All NYA project workers are required to register at public employment offices, and in an effort to help young people secure jobs in private industry the National Youth Administration has fostered establishment of a junior placement service in connection with the employment services of the several states. Two hundred one thousand, six hundred and thirty-seven young men and women have been placed in private jobs since the inauguration of this service in March, 1936, through July 1, 1939. In Alabama during this period 1,258 youths have been placed in private employment.

NYA has also maintained a vocational guidance service to assist young people in determining the choice of an occupation in line with their natural abilities. This service has published a series of occupational and industrial studies outlining employment possibilities and requirements for jobs in various industries and vocations.

As a result of a truck market established at Evergreen through aid of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, approximately 2,000 acres were planted in vegetables in Conecuh County this season. Farmers realized about $68,000 from sale of these crops.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Wooten and daughters, Misses Nell and Mildred Wooten, spent Monday and Tuesday in Reform.

Engineer Warns Of Wet Cotton

Auburn Alabama, J. B. Wilson agricultural engineer of the state Alabama ginners that their problem this year would be of handling wet cotton and urged them to obtain the best product available from the States short cotton crop.

Wilson said that most of the gins have overhauled the equipment before starting this years ginning but that this overhauling will not take care of wet, dirty cotton. Either a cotton drier is necessary or cotton must be stored until it dries naturally, the engineer said, before cotton can be put into shape for ginning.

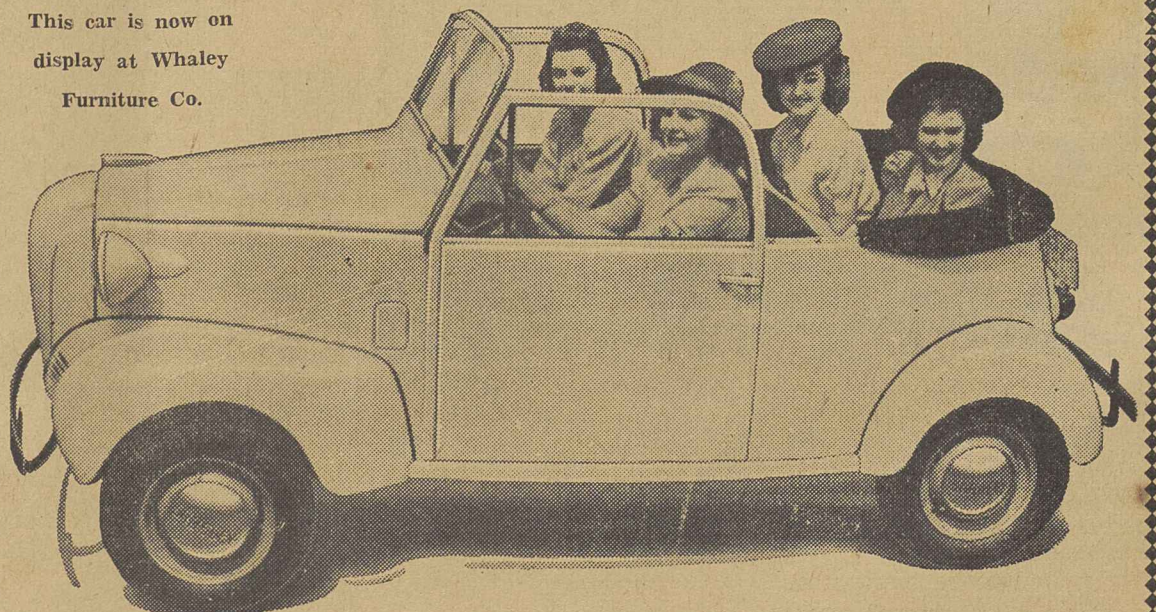

"The cotton drier is an attachment that through the use of artificial heat and an air blast will extract the excess moisture before cotton reaches the gin," he said. "Since these driers give some agitation to the cotton during the drying process, a good percentage of the trash and dirt is shaken out. Short staple cotton should not be ginned with more than 12 per cent moisture content and long staple with more than 9 per cent.

"These cotton driers are manufactured by most gin manufacturers and can usually be installed without altering the present gin equipment. Also, the Stoneville Cotton Ginning Laboratory at Stoneville, Mississippi, has perfected the vertical drier which can be constructed at the gin. This drier has proven satisfactory and is comparatively cheap.

Both farmers and ginners are responsible for the condition of the cotton when it comes away from the gin; therefore, it behooves every one concerned to do his part toward making a good sample at the gin—and this calls for well harvested and well ginned cotton. Therefore, it should be clean and dry if a good sample is expected."
